A Word from Father...

Dear Friends,

We have begun well our Advent season! The evergreen wreath has been hung, the first of four candles lit, and the hymns of the liturgy sing of the sure and certain hope that the Lord is nigh!

The Aramaic word, "Maranatha", found in Paul's first letter to the Corinthians (1Cor 16:22), captures the spirit of the season in two important ways. It is actually two words mashed together, but depending on where it is split, it can mean either "Our Lord has come!" ...more of a profession of faith in the incarnation, the Lord has already come, or it can mean, "Come, Lord!" ...almost a command for the Lord to come.

I like both possibilities and both throw subtle light on the reason for the season. On the one hand, we certainly are deeply aware that we are beneficiaries of the historical coming of Jesus; we are "preparing" for something which has already happened, which seems on the first face of it to be contradictory, but actually we are preparing not for the actual, historical coming of Jesus, but the remembering of that great event in our spiritual story. The celebration allows us to rejoice anew at this blessing in our lives and to experience its rich blessings in a way not bound by time or place. Our Jewish forebears were great for recognizing in such celebrations the enduring grace of God at work in their life as a community and as individuals. Thus, what we prepare for now is not the historical birth of Jesus as if we were living in the 2nd century, BC, but the remembering of that great moment in time which continues to surprise, delight and lead us to praise even now.

The second sense of "Maranatha" captures something distinct from the first. We plead, beg, even make bold to order the Lord to continue coming into our lives and our world. The world is a mess and our own lives are far from perfect; we cannot save ourselves from ourselves. We continue to need God's hand to lift us out of our morass of injustice, intolerance, hatred, jealousy, and war. We still must call on the Lord to intervene in our family feuds with their ever-increasing mountains of recrimination and revenge. We still look to the compassionate heart of God to lead us in the end to the creation he has dreamed for us to become from the very beginning.

Both ways, it is a great prayer: simple, passionate, direct, and perfect for Advent:

Our Lord has come!

Come, Lord, come!

Maranatha!

Fr. Kevin
