A Word from Father...

Dear Friends,

This weekend is a special one for me and for quite a number of others in our area. As people who have shucked off the clothing of cultured, modern, and very busy-about-many-things people and replaced them with the simple duds of the pilgrim, the Feast of Saint James is the occasion for plenty of rejoicing, for we love this guy. He is the patron saint of pilgrims and there are more and more of us who are humbly proud (is that a thing?) of being his pilgrims. We felt in some weird way that he called and beckoned us, arranged times, seasons, and finances to make our coming possible, protected us along the long road from our front door to his, and blessed us for the small sacrifices we made along the Way. Saint James, or "Santiago" as he is known in Spanish, ("Jacques" in French, Jakob in Dutch).

As we walked from church to church across northern Spain (and for some of us, France as well), we met him often in the beautiful old statues set up in niches with flickering vigil candles just below. We brought him our prayers and intentions, and asked him to carry them to his friend and boss, Jesus, and just generally felt accompanied by this Apostle, one of the "Sons of Thunder," (John being the other). Once we arrived at his traditional burial place in the city of Compostela, we stood in line to climb up steep stairs to give the great statue of him above the high altar the pilgrim "abrazo" or embrace, then climbed down under the altar to say a prayer of thanksgiving before his bones. As amazing as the "botafumeiro" is as this giant censor swung above our heads, the abrazo and the prayers below in the crypt were far more moving.

Those thirty or so days in our lives taught us so much about how to live as a community without fear or prejudice, how to care for one another and share anything and everything, how to delight in the small lovelinesses that abound in the natural world around us, how to welcome and be welcomed, how to pray and how to love.

So this is why we want to continue to celebrate even long after we finished walking and gone home. To remember and give thanks for the pilgrim Way, the pilgrim Life, that has so blessed us and enriched our lives.

James the Greater's feast is actually this Monday, the 25th, but our celebration will be tonight (Sunday), as it is in Compostela itself. As many of you know, we will be having a special Saint James Pilgrim Mass and Blessing at 5:00 pm, followed by a dinner together, here at the church. All are welcome.

Fr. Kevin
